This week in the Senate

May 9 - May 13, 2016

After completing the budget bill last week, the Senate worked through many bills on the calendar and set up the next round of major debate by setting two bills for special order - H. 4548 and H. 3799 - giving them priority status on the calendar.

H. 4548, also known as the dealer closing fee bill, is related to a dispute between car dealers and consumers over a charge used to finalize the purchase of a car. This bill responds to two lawsuits filed by consumers claiming the fee didn't relate to any real closing expenses. The South Carolina Supreme Court ruled in 2015 in favor of those consumers, but a cluster of pending lawsuits still exist. This bill clarifies what dealers can count as closing costs and calls for lawsuits brought under the closing fee statute to only be heard individually rather than as a group. Proponents of the bill say the mass action of pending lawsuits could bankrupt the car dealer industry. Critics say passing the bill could set a poor precedent where litigants turn to the legislature to overturn a court decision.

H. 3799 would extend concealed-weapon reciprocity to North Carolina and to Georgia. Proponents of the legislation have said the bill would make it easier for residents to travel between neighboring states should they decide to carry a firearm. Critics have pointed to the absence of a gun-safety training requirement in Georgia and the state's lack of a centralized database of permit holder arrests.

Other bills passed by the Senate this week include:

Third Reading:
